PUBLISHING INTO THE CLASSROOMS!

PUBLICATION MEETS THE CLASSROOM

We're always ready to help young authors.

We bring our book writing & publishing expertise to classroom settings nationwide to propel the youth to become published authors. We teach high school and college students to write and publish a book through our Creative Writing Publishing Program. We recognize that publishing is a powerful incentive for the learning space that provides a unique way to validate that your students' voices and stories should be heard. Participants in our program will not only learn to create and publish their stories, but they will also enhance their reading, writing, and overall communication skills.

Improved performance in these areas will benefit their attitudes toward school and encourage them to become lifelong learners. Students will understand writing and the time, effort, and planning of publishing a book. They will also receive practical experience by working on weekly activities, including reading, writing, and critical thinking. Your students will work with a publisher, graphic designer, and editor to publish their short stories. The Educare Publications Creative Writing Publishing Program allows young people to progress from aspiring writers to published authors. Specifically, our program teaches students the book writing and publishing process to elevate student voices in the classrooms.
